16 Dear Sir.

I have written a Parallel between the characters of Webster and Saul. Mr. Thompson has suggested that I should send it to you. If you think it worth insertion in the Liberator, it is at your service. If you please to alter or modify it in any way it is quite at your mercy. I know there is great difference of opinion on your side of the water with reference to the character of Webster, and in the judgment of some of your readers I doubt not I have assigned him too high a position of influence. I had some notion of drawing a second parallel between David and yourself, but I was not sure you would take it as a compliment.

Our friend Mr. Thompson, I am sure you will be glad to hear is in good health and spirits. He delivered a lecture on American Slavery the other night to a crowded auditory in London, and is engaged to deliver another next Thursday, at which it is expected the Lord Mayor of London will preside. Uncle Tom has been dramatized at nearly every theatre in England, and is having a greater "run" than any other piece.

I am Dear Sir

Yours most truly

J. Sumner
